Japan: Zengakuren, the militant Communist-dominated Japanese university students' organization, plans to force an entry to the Diet grounds during demonstrations scheduled for 10 December throughout Japan against the US-Japanese Security Treaty. The Socialist party has appealed to the "People's Council" sponsoring the campaign to exclude the student organization, but the students have announced they will "go it alone" if necessary, defying both the sponsoring Council and the police. Violence is possible, as police plan to use barricades and nightsticks to protect the Diet grounds. The government appears able and determined to handle the immediate situation; it continues to move cautiously in exploiting public opinion which is building up in favor of curbing leftist extremism.

Saudi Arabia: The continuing dispute with Aramco and Tapline over profit-sharing, by delaying production increases has probably cost Saudi Arabia its position as second largest oil producer in the Middle East. Saudi crude oil is moving through Tapline to the Mediterranean at less than half of full capacity, and over-all Saudi oil production has not increased appreciably over 1956 levels. Production in adjoining states has increased substantially, and Iran now holds second place behind Kuwait. By spring Iraq also may surpass Saudi production.
